Since the recovery from the effects of the panic 5,000 Similar Bargains, too numerous to mention, there of 1873, the surplus revenue of the government has reach the enormous figure of $167,000,000 for the current fiscal year. Last year it was over $100,000,-000, and the receipts at the Treasury since the first of July are so much in excess of those for the same period of that year, that it is safe to estimate an increase of fifty per cent in the surplus revenue. DALAIS ROYAL, The theory of our government is to lighten the burden of taxation whenever and wherever it can be done without injury to the public service. Con: gress at the coming session will, in all probability, take up this subject of the GLOVES. surplus revenue, which will invoive. almost GLOVES. necessarily, the tariff as well as internal taxation. The problem for Congress to solve will be to reduce the revenue to the actual needs of the | GLOVES. government by lightening the taxation so that the relief will be divided equitably among the people; to frame a measure that will benefit the masses, the producers and laborers. Ex-Speaker Randall, GLOVES. representing a strong tariff state, argues in favor of the entire abolishment of internal taxation and the raising of all revenue from customs dues. He GLOVES. will, no doubt, find numbers of Congressmen to GLOVES. agree with him in the proposition that the taxation should be reduced whenever it produces more than the government needs for its legitimate ex- GLOVES. penses; but his method of reduction will probably meet strong opposition. Much of the internal taxation falls so lightly upon the people that it GLOVES, cannot properly be termed a burden in any sense and to abolish this character of tax would not relieve or benefit the masses. Take, for instance, the tax on matches. It is so small that its abolishment would not probably reduce the retail. price of matches a particle. Therefore, Mr. Ranwhisky and tobacco, articles that are nowise sideration, should be made to contribute to the government's support. The luxuries should, as far as is practicable, bear the burden of taxation. surplus that now yearly comes into the government's coffers, it will, in order to distribute the benefit of the reduction of taxation justly among the people, have to consider changes in the tariff as well as internal tax. 4+ The contest in the eleventh congressional district of New York city for the seat made vacant by the resignation of Minister Morton is being watched with considerable interest, because of the narrow margin between the two parties in the next House. Mr. W. W. Astor, one of the notable millionaire family, is the republican nominee, and Mr. Roswell P. Flower is the democratic candidate. Both men have plenty of money and they are spending it liberally. The leading politicians of both parties in New York have enlisted under the service of their respective candidates in the district, service of their respective candidates in the district, and the "boys," as political strikers are called, are having a good time. They only have to go to the headquarters of one candidate or the other, and name the sum they think necessary for the day's work. Sums of money, ranging from $25 upwards, according to the location and size of the saloon, are placed in the hands of barkeepers, with Instructions to "treat it out" in the name of the candidate who puts up the money. Mr. Astor undertook to canvass the district personally, and get acquainted with the voters. After spending several days in driving from point to point, he ascertained that Mr. Flower was following him, and where Astor put up $50 in a saloon, Flower would cover it with $100. Mr. Aster was a state senator in the last legislature, and he stood by Conkling and Platt to the last. Mr. Flower has never been in politics before. The district was democratic until Mr. Morton carried it, (at a cost of $125,000, it is said), and the chances of the two present competitors appear to be pretty nearly even. Success under the circumstances would not seem to be particularly creditable to either candidate.

The press and public men of Texas deny the report that public sentiment there favors a division of the state and the creation of three additional states out of her territory. The papers declare that no man could be elected to office who was suspected of a division of the state, so strong is public opinion against it.
